in Botswana the foe is the red-billed quelea which is the most populous wild bird on the planet. It is also discouraged between the months of May and September due to the potential for serious consequences from heat stress.